A final tabulation on the Wis-consin votes showed today that Stassen positively had won 18 delegates to eight for MacArthur and a shutout for Dewey. Taft was not entered there.

Meanwhile, at Chicago, Henry R. Wallace assured his followers that he would stay a Third-Party candidate no matter who is nominated by the Democrats. Or by the Republicans either, for that matter.

In Los Angeles, white-haired Norman Thomas, five times the Socialist Presidential candidate, said the Republicans' best bet would be a ticket with Vandenberg on top and Stassen in the second notch.

Eisenhower wasn't saying anything. And neither was the only man who is announced for the Democratic nomination—the fellow who already is in the White House.

SOVIETS

Bearing down on the sorest point, the Soviets persisted in an apparent campaign to close the air corridor of the Western allies through the Soviet zone to Berlin. They made fresh charges that an average of 23 Anglo-American planes violated regulations over the zone each month.

The Americans and British, bristling at the about-face of the Soviets in their attitude on the Berlin crash Monday, showed signs of renewing their once cancelled orders for fighter escort of their transports over Soviet territory.

The Soviets put out orders that only two mail cars could pass through the Soviet zone to Western Germany each day, according to the American-licensed newspaper Tagesspiegel. It said 15 cars a day were needed, and 75 cars loaded with some 100,000 packages addressed to Western Germany were backed up in Berlin.

The East and the West traded hot words for 12 hours yesterday in a Kommandatura sub-committee meeting, officials reported. Col. Alexander Yelizarov of Russia renewed the charge that the British and Americans were looting Berlin through their export program. Brig. E. B. Benson of Britain challenged him. An American official said the Russian officer engaged in the

Here was a man who killed his wife and her lawyer in cold blood and then killed himself. Before that he devised an ingenious plan to destroy his home by fire. He chafed the words "Hell's Half Acre" on the steps leading to his property and he called his power boat "Hell's-a-poppin'." He kept a grotesque figure of a woman before him at his table and he may have been motivated by his horoscope.

He was born 45 years ago in Fairmont, attended Rivesville high school, received training as an upholsterer, became a skilled miner. His parents died several years ago. He was married, had two children, and then was divorced. He married Nellie Marie Wright of Monongah in 1942 and they lived together until January, when they separated, presumably after he had assaulted her. Efforts at reconciliation failed and divorce proceedings were scheduled for June.

Working together, before they parted they had created a beautiful home on Hampton road. He had the home, an automobile and a speed boat and apparently was prosperous.

Friends declared that he was of a solitary disposition, inclined to brood, prejudiced against persons of other races. An introvert. The departure of his wife, the court order, various unhappy circumstances so embittered him that he apparently developed a persecution complex. He felt that the world was against him.

And then came a probable paranoid break. Says Karl Menninger: "The victims of paranoid breaks are burning with hate and fear and revenge. They are forever erecting defenses and plotting retaliation. Sometimes, too many times, they carry out these plans."

Yost, it would appear, carried out his plans!

All of which is only speculation and may be wrong as wrong. It appears reasonable to assume, on the record, that Yost had a sick mind and that his fatal activities of Wednesday were dictated by that sick mind. Thus one can have no sympathy with persons who wanted him to recover from his wound, so that he might be punished under the law.

If they were alive today, Mrs. Yost and Attorney Morocco doubtless would ask for Yost not grim justice—but mercy.

At the court session Monday, Judge Goldsborough also will rule on a government request that the temporary restraining order be replaced by a full 90-day injunction under the Taft-Hartley law.

In still another legal action, the Southern Coal Producers association has asked the National Labor Relations Board to seek a federal court injunction requiring the mine union to bargain collectively with it in the pension dispute.

The union has refused to recognize the Southern association as agents for the Southern mine owners in the court-ordered negotiations. The association claims it has the legal authority to bargain for the Southern operators and has charged the union with refusal to bargain under the Taft-Hartley act. It will be some time, however, before this issue is settled in the courts.

PILOT OPENINGS IN AIR FORCE

Young men who have completed two years of college or can pass necessary examinations have an opportunity to get the world's finest pilot training, Capt. Benjamin H. McElhinney, Jr., announced today.

He reported that after being trained, the enlistee will be rated as a pilot, commissioned as second lieutenant in the Air Force Reserve, and assigned to flying duty with the U. S. Air Force.

For further information contact the local U. S. Army and U. S. Air Force recruiting station, Old Post Office building in Monroe street.
